13 Ways to Screw Up a College Interview (And How to Avoid Them)

Landing that dream college acceptance often hinges on more than just stellar grades and test scores. The college interview is your chance to shine, to showcase your personality and potential beyond the numbers. But what happens when that opportunity turns into a disaster? This post outlines 13 common mistakes students make during college interviews, providing insights and actionable advice to help you avoid them and ace your interview. We'll cover everything from preparation blunders to conversational pitfalls, ensuring you leave a lasting positive impression.

1. Failing to Prepare: The Foundation of Disaster

This is the cardinal sin of college interviews. Insufficient preparation screams lack of interest and respect. Thorough preparation isn't just about researching the college; it's about knowing yourself and your goals.

What to do instead: Research the college extensively, understand its mission, values, and programs. Practice answering common interview questions, reflecting on your experiences and aspirations. Prepare thoughtful questions to ask the interviewer.

2. Arriving Late (or Too Early): Punctuality Matters

Punctuality demonstrates respect for the interviewer's time. Arriving late shows disrespect, while arriving excessively early can be equally disruptive.

What to do instead: Plan your route carefully, accounting for traffic and unforeseen delays. Aim to arrive 5-10 minutes early, allowing time to compose yourself without keeping the interviewer waiting unnecessarily.

3. Inappropriate Attire: First Impressions Count

Your attire sets the tone for the entire interview. Showing up in anything less than neat and presentable sends the wrong message.

What to do instead: Opt for business casual attire. This generally means a neat shirt or blouse, dress pants or a skirt, and comfortable yet presentable shoes. Avoid anything too casual, revealing, or distracting.

4. Poor Body Language: Communicating Non-Verbally

Your body language speaks volumes. Slouching, fidgeting, or avoiding eye contact projects insecurity and disinterest.

What to do instead: Maintain good posture, make eye contact (without staring intensely), and use open and welcoming body language. A confident posture conveys self-assurance and engagement.

5. Rambling or Being Vague: Concise Communication

Going off on tangents or providing vague answers demonstrates a lack of focus and organizational skills.

What to do instead: Practice concise and focused responses. Structure your answers logically, highlighting key points and avoiding unnecessary details.

6. Negativity About Previous Schools or Teachers: Maintaining Positivity

Complaining about past experiences portrays a negative attitude and a lack of maturity.

What to do instead: Focus on positive aspects of your experiences, highlighting what you've learned and how you've grown. Frame challenges as opportunities for learning and development.

7. Failing to Ask Questions: Demonstrating Lack of Interest

Not asking questions signals disinterest and a lack of proactive engagement.

What to do instead: Prepare several insightful questions beforehand, demonstrating your genuine interest in the college and its community. Tailor your questions to the specific program or aspect of the college that interests you.

8. Using Excessive Slang or Jargon: Maintaining Professionalism

Using excessive slang or jargon can be unprofessional and create a barrier to communication.

What to do instead: Maintain a professional tone, using clear and concise language appropriate for a formal setting.

9. Ignoring Interviewer's Cues: Active Listening is Key

Failing to pay attention to the interviewer's cues, both verbal and nonverbal, shows a lack of respect and engagement.

What to do instead: Pay close attention to the interviewer's questions and responses, and adjust your communication accordingly. Be responsive and engaged throughout the conversation.

10. Bringing Electronics to the Interview: Maintaining Focus

Unless absolutely necessary (and even then, it's generally best to avoid it), avoid bringing electronic devices to the interview.

What to do instead: Turn off your phone and leave it in your bag or car. Focus entirely on the interview, demonstrating respect for the interviewer's time.

11. Dishonesty or Exaggeration: Integrity Matters

Lying or exaggerating your accomplishments is a major red flag and can severely damage your chances.

What to do instead: Be truthful and authentic in your responses. Highlight your strengths and accomplishments honestly, without embellishment.

12. Focusing Solely on Prestige: Beyond the Rankings

Only focusing on the college's reputation or ranking shows a lack of self-awareness and genuine interest in the institution's values.

What to do instead: Express your interest in specific programs, faculty, research opportunities, or aspects of campus life that genuinely appeal to you.

13. Not Following Up: Leaving a Lasting Impression

Failing to send a thank-you note shows a lack of professionalism and appreciation.

What to do instead: Send a thank-you email within 24 hours, reiterating your interest and highlighting key points from the conversation.

Conclusion:

A college interview is a crucial opportunity to showcase your potential. By avoiding these common pitfalls and preparing thoroughly, you can significantly increase your chances of making a positive impression and securing your place at your dream college. Remember, authenticity, preparation, and respect are key to a successful interview.

FAQs:

1. What if I make a mistake during the interview? Don't panic! Everyone makes occasional mistakes. Acknowledge it briefly and move on. Focus on answering subsequent questions thoughtfully and demonstrating your overall strengths.
2. How long should my answers be? Aim for concise and focused answers, avoiding rambling. A good rule of thumb is to answer thoroughly but not excessively.
3. What if I don't know the answer to a question? It's okay to admit you don't know something. It's better to be honest than to fabricate an answer.
4. Should I bring a portfolio? This depends on the program you're applying for. If you're applying for a creative arts program, a portfolio might be appropriate. Otherwise, it's generally not necessary.
5. How can I practice for the interview? Practice with friends, family, or a mentor. Record yourself answering common interview questions to identify areas for improvement. Consider mock interviews with a career counselor.

13 ways to screw up a college interview: 13 Ways to Screw Up Your College Interview Ian McWethy, 2009-08-11 When two college recruiters at a prestigious university need to fill one last spot to keep their jobs, thirteen eccentric, dimwitted and slightly-insane high school seniors are eager to come in for an interview. What seems like a simple task turns into a nightmare when the applicants turn out to be a reality TV star, a practicing vampire, an amateur magician, and others that are much, much worse. Each applicant's interview hilariously illustrates what NOT to do at a college interview.

13 ways to screw up a college interview: Permission to Screw Up Kristen Hadeed, 2017-10-10 The inspiring, unlikely, laugh-out-loud story of how one woman learned to lead—and how she ultimately succeeded, not despite her many mistakes, but because of them. This is the story of how Kristen Hadeed built Student Maid, a cleaning company where people are happy, loyal, productive, and empowered, even while they're mopping floors and scrubbing toilets. It's the story of how she went from being an almost comically inept leader to a sought-after CEO who teaches others how to lead. Hadeed unintentionally launched Student Maid while attending college ten years ago. Since then, Student Maid has employed hundreds of students and is widely recognized for its industry-leading retention rate and its culture of trust and accountability. But Kristen and her company were no overnight sensation. In fact, they were almost nothing at all. Along the way, Kristen got it wrong almost as often as she got it right. Giving out hugs instead of feedback, fixing errors instead of enforcing accountability, and hosting parties instead of cultivating meaningful relationships were just a few of her many mistakes. But Kristen's willingness to admit and learn from those mistakes helped her give her people the chance to learn from their own screwups too. Permission to Screw Up dismisses the idea that leaders and organizations should try to be perfect. It encourages people of all ages to go for it and learn to lead by acting, rather than waiting or thinking. Through a brutally honest and often hilarious account of her own struggles, Kristen encourages us to embrace our failures and proves that we'll be better leaders when we do.

A must-read for every parent who senses that there is a healthier and saner way to raise our children. -Madeline Levine, author of the New York Times bestsellers The Price of Privilege and Teach Your Children Well For parents who want to foster hearty self-reliance instead of hollow self-esteem, How to Raise an Adult is the right book at the right time. -Daniel H. 13 ways to screw up a college interview: How to Fall in Love with Anyone Mandy Len Catron, 2017-06-27 "A beautifully written and well-researched cultural criticism as well as an honest memoir" (Los Angeles Review of Books) from the author of the popular New York Times essay, "To Fall in Love with Anyone, Do This," explores the romantic myths we create and explains how they limit our ability to achieve and sustain intimacy. What really makes love last? Does love ever work the way we say it does in movies and books and Facebook posts? Or does obsessing over those love stories hurt our real-life relationships? When her parents divorced after a twenty-eight year marriage and her own ten-year relationship ended, those were the questions that Mandy Len Catron wanted to answer. In a series of candid, vulnerable, and wise essays that takes a closer look at what it means to love someone, be loved, and how we present our love to the world, "Catron melds science and emotion beautifully into a thoughtful and thought-provoking meditation" (Bookpage).

She delves back to 1944, when her grandparents met in a coal mining town in Appalachia, to her own dating life as a professor in Vancouver. She uses biologists' research into dopamine triggers to ask whether the need to love is an innate human drive. She uses literary theory to show why we prefer certain kinds of love stories. She urges us to question the unwritten scripts we follow in relationships and looks into where those scripts come from. And she tells the story of how she decided to test an experiment that she'd read about—where the goal was to create intimacy between strangers using a list of thirty-six questions—and ended up in the surreal situation of having millions of people following her brand-new relationship. "Perfect fodder for the romantic and the cynic in all of us" (Booklist), How to Fall in Love with Anyone flips the script on love. "Clear-eyed and full of heart, it is mandatory reading for anyone coping with—or curious about—the challenges of contemporary courtship" (The Toronto Star).

13 ways to screw up a college interview: Eve Was Framed Helena Kennedy, 2011-03-31 Eve Was Framed offers an impassioned, personal critique of the British legal system. Helena Kennedy focuses on the treatment of women in our courts - at the prejudices of judges, the misconceptions of jurors, the labyrinths of court procedures and the influence of the media. But the inequities she uncovers could apply equally to any disadvantaged group - to those whose cases are subtly affected by race, class poverty or politics, or who are burdened, even before they appear in court, by misleading stereotypes.

13 ways to screw up a college interview: The Cheat Sheet Sarah Adams, 2022-04-26 Is it ever too late to leave the friend zone? Discover the heartwarming friends to lovers romance that became a sensation on TikTok—now with a new chapter and a Q&A with the author! The friend zone is not the end zone for Bree Camden, who is helplessly in love with her longtime best friend and extremely hot NFL legend, Nathan Donelson. The only problem is that she can't admit her true feelings, because he clearly sees her as a best friend with no romantic potential, and the last thing Bree wants is to ruin their relationship. But those abs . . . Nope! Nothing but good old-fashioned, no-touching-the-sexiest-man-alive, platonic friendship for Bree. In any case, she has other things to worry about. After a car accident ended her chance at becoming a professional ballerina, Bree changed paths and now owns her own dance studio, with big dreams to expand it. But one more rent increase could mean the end of the studio entirely. Then, as usual, Nathan comes to the rescue and buys the entire building. A stubborn Bree is not happy about it and decides to rebel with a couple—okay, maybe more than a couple—of tequila shots. Then her plan backfires as she spills her deepest, darkest secret to a TMZ reporter. One viral video later, the world thinks Nathan and Bree are the perfect couple. Before they can really talk about her confession, Nathan's publicist proposes a big opportunity that could mean financial security for Bree. The catch? They have to pretend to be in love. For three whole weeks. What will happen when Bree gives in to the feelings she's been desperately hiding for so long, and could she be imagining that Nathan is actually enjoying it? Sarah Adams scores more than touchdowns in this exciting romantic comedy.

In-depth interviews and close observation are essential to the work of social scientists, but inserting one's researcher-self into the lives of others can be daunting, especially early on. Esteemed sociologist Annette Lareau is here to help. Lareau's clear, insightful, and personal guide is not your average methods text. It promises to reduce researcher anxiety while illuminating the best methods for first-rate research practice. As the title of this book suggests, Lareau considers listening to be the core element of interviewing and observation. A researcher must listen to people as she collects data, listen to feedback as she describes what she is learning, listen to the findings of others as they delve into the existing literature on topics, and listen to herself in order to sift and prioritize some aspects of the study over others. By listening in these different ways, researchers will discover connections, reconsider assumptions, catch mistakes, develop and assess new ideas, weigh priorities, ponder new directions, and undertake numerous adjustments—all of which will make their contributions clearer and more valuable. Accessibly written and full of practical, easy-to-follow guidance, this book will help both novice and experienced researchers to do their very best work. Qualitative research is an inherently uncertain project, but with Lareau's help, you can alleviate anxiety and focus on success.

13 ways to screw up a college interview: How to Blow Up a Pipeline Andreas Malm, 2021-01-05 Property will cost us the earth The science on climate change has been clear for a very long time now. Yet despite decades of appeals, mass street protests, petition campaigns, and peaceful demonstrations, we are still facing a booming fossil fuel industry, rising seas, rising emission levels, and a rising temperature. With the stakes so high, why haven't we moved beyond peaceful protest? In this lyrical manifesto, noted climate scholar (and saboteur of SUV tires and coal mines) Andreas Malm makes an impassioned call for the climate movement to escalate its tactics in the face of ecological collapse. We need, he argues, to force fossil fuel extraction to stop—with our actions, with our bodies, and by defusing and destroying its tools. We need, in short, to start blowing up some oil pipelines. Offering a counter-history of how mass popular change has occurred, from the democratic revolutions overthrowing dictators to the movement against apartheid and for women's suffrage, Malm argues that the strategic acceptance of property destruction and violence has been the only route for revolutionary change. In a braided narrative that moves from the forests of Germany and the streets of London to the deserts of Iraq, Malm offers us an incisive discussion of the politics and ethics of pacifism and violence, democracy and social change, strategy and tactics, and a movement compelled by both the heart and the mind. Here is how we fight in a world on fire.
